

Jack's Hen

Key Word: Raised

Key Verse: He is not here, for he has been raised, as he said. Come, see the place where he lay.
Matthew 28:6

Jack's favorite hen, Polly had died. He found her before Easter, with broken feathers. Jack's mom thought a fox had gotten in. Jack walked around sadly. Percy the cockerel had survived, and Jack bent down to pet him, then something caught Jack's eye. Hidden in the straw was an egg. As Jack picked it up, he felt hopeful. Carefully he carried the egg home, and placed it in some straw in a box, in a warm cupboard. His mom said the egg needed plenty of warmth. Mom warned Jack, "It may not hatch. I don't want you to be disappointed." But Jack had a feeling he wouldn't be disappointed. On Easter Day, he noticed a tiny crack. After a long time of watching he could hear slight tapping noises. Jack saw a tiny beak attached to the smallest, wettest chick, not much bigger than his thumb, break out of the egg. It rested, but then it struggled out of the shell.

Jack was too excited to even call his mom. Feather by feather the chick dried out, until it was fluffy and yellow, a perfect Easter chick. Jack called his whole family to see his Easter miracle. His dad clapped him on the shoulder. "There are at least six Easter eggs waiting for you downstairs," said his dad, "but you're more interested in this Easter egg. Some Easter eggs have surprises inside, but I don't know of any that contain real life like this one does."

Downstairs, Jack broke off a piece of chocolate Easter egg. "I love Easter eggs," he said, "but my baby chick is really about Easter. Polly died, and that was very sad. I won't forget Polly, but it feels like she gave me new life in this little chick, and when I watched the chick breaking out of the egg, it made me think of Jesus. I suppose that cave where they put his body was a bit like an egg, for he broke out somehow and he was somehow all new."

Jack's mom smiled. "Now you know why we give Easter eggs at Easter. Jesus broke out of the tomb to bring special new life to all of us. You've seen it for yourself this Easter, and I have a feeling I know what your little chick will be called."

Jack nodded. "Easter," he said.
